TREASON ITEMS.

Fort Moultrie and Castle Pinckney have fallen into the hands of the Charleston rioters, as everybody expected they would. They will now have to be taken back by broadsides, at the expense of the United States.

The Treason Commissioners from South Carolina had an interview with the President and his Cabinet, yesterday, and demanded the immediate removal of all troops from the vicinity of Charleston. The result of the interview has not transpired.

Meanwhile, the monstrous pranks of the Administration have run the public credit into the ditch, and the unheard-of spectacle is offered to the world if a wealthy and prosperous nation unable to borrow $5,000,000 to pay the salaries of its public servants. Yesterday the bids for the above loan were opened at the Treasury Department, and it was found that less than $2,500,000 had been subscribed at an average rate of twelve per cent. interest!

What next? We are getting use to these things, but we do wonder what the next thing will be. Let them mortgage the public buildings, sell the portrait of Washington, and close out the stock.

MORE PATCH WORK.

"Break all your dishes, madam, and I'll mend 'em as good as new—mend 'em so they'll break in another place next time." So vociferated an ancient pedler of patent cement before the days of Spaldings' Prepared Glue. Break up your present Union, gentlemen; smash your Constitution to flinders and we'll fix them up again on a new plan within ninety days—fix them so they won't break in the same places very soon. So exclaim a new gang of government tinkers at Washington, of whom Mr. Breckinridge seems to be tinker-in-chief. We refer the reader to an exposition of their plans from our Washington correspondent, elsewhere in this paper. It does not seem to have entered the heads of these parties that the people of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa are perfectly satisfied with the Union as it exists, and with the Constitution as our fathers made it. They love the national flag, they are reasonably proud of the American eagle, they are unalterably attached to "E Pluribus Unum," and they are far readier to show their strength in preserving these things than in pulling them to pieces to accommodate Mr. Breckinridge's genius for patch-work.

The Melee at Washington.

[Special Dispatch to the Cincinnati Gazette.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.

The Senate Committee of Thirteen voted on a large number of propositions yesterday, but were unable to agree upon anything. I have it from reliable authority that the Committee will be unable to make a report. Another meeting will be held to-morrow.

Well informed persons say the movement is a good one. Fort Sumpter commands Fort Moultrie, and is impregnable, while the latter is not. Moultrie is also a mere shell, while the other side are jubilant.

It is reported that Secretary Floyd is to be indicted for malfeasance in office, and that Gen. Scott will succeed him as Secretary of War. The change would be a good one. Mr. Floyd is reported to be nearly crazy.

In the Treasury Department no fraud has so far been discovered.

The President's message, relative to secession movements, will be sent in on Monday. Senator Benjamin of La. will open the discussion.

The Committee of Thirty-three will be unable to report. The proposition of Mr. Crittenden of Mass. to admit New Mexico with slavery, is unfavorably regarded by Republicans generally.

The opinion gains ground that Lincoln's Administration will be opposed by force, but those who favor it have said too much in the newspapers about the matter. People when seriously meditating an outrage of that kind, do not talk a great deal about it.

One of the South Carolina Commissioners says unless the Government shows a willingness to reinforce the garrison at Fort Moultrie, he will assume the presumption that reinforcements are not moved for the purpose of strengthening the federal government.

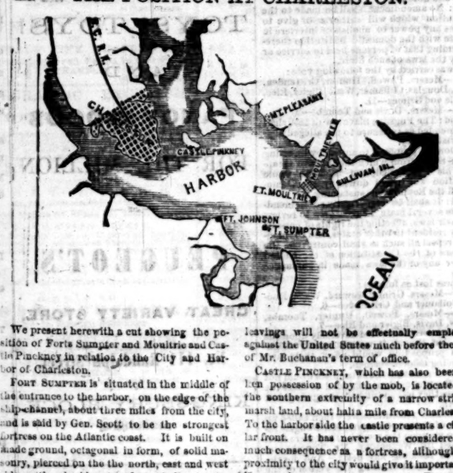
We trust Congress will see at once the importance of instituting an inquiry into the question which has been made of any arms or ammunition since the election, that the public may speedily know what light will attach to the transaction. Secrecy on this occasion would be quietest. Such a resolution, we believe, was offered by Mr. Delano, of Massachusetts, a few days since, but in consequence of the objection of the Georgia delegation, its consideration was postponed. General disposition throughout the country to the delegation to prevent this inquiry justifies the suspicion that it would bring out information with which the whole nation is deeply concerned.

Gov. Hicks Still Refuses to Convene the Legislature.

[From the Baltimore American 26th.]

We are authorized by the Committee, composed of Hon. W. H. Dorsey, Wright, W. H. Thomas, C. Jenkins and Judge Legrand, to state that they waited on Governor Hicks yesterday night, and urged upon him the strong reasons for convoking the Legislature without delay, but his Excellency refused to yield his opinion as to the necessity of calling that body, declaring that it was his duty to await the action of Missouri, Kentucky and Virginia. Until their Legislatures had met he was opposed to calling together the Legislature. He was unwilling to believe that he would call it in any event, unless on that question he reserved for future decision.

THE POSITION AT CHARLESTON.



We present herewith a cut showing the position of Forts Sumpter and Moultrie and Castle Pinckney in relation to the City and Harbor of Charleston.

Fort Sumpter is situated in the middle of the entrances to the harbor, on the edge of the ship-channel, about three miles from the city, and is said by Gen. Scott to be the strongest fortress on the Atlantic coast. It is built on made ground, octagonal in form, of solid masonry, pierced on the the north, east and west sides with a double row of portholes for the heaviest guns, and on the south or land side, in addition to openings for guns, loop-holed for musketry, and is bomb proof. The armament of Fort Sumpter consists of 140 guns, many of them being the formidable ten-inch "Columbiads," which throw either shot or shell, and which have a fearful range. There is also a large amount of artillery stores, consisting of upward of 300 pounds of powder, and a proportionate quantity of shot and shell. The wharf or landing is on the south side, and is of course exposed to a cross-fire from the openings on that side.

Fort Moultrie is an enclosed water battery, about one mile north-east of Fort Sumpter, having a front on the south, or water side, of about 200 feet, and a depth of about 240 feet. It is built with salient and re-entering angles on all sides, and is admirably adapted for defence, either from the attack of a storming party, or by regular approaches. The outer and inner walls are of brick, capped with stone, and filled with earth, making a solid wall 15 or 16 feet in thickness. The height of the wall, from the bottom of the ditch to the top of the parapet, is twenty feet. The ditch is from twelve to fifteen feet wide at the base, and fifteen feet deep. The work on the south side is nearly finished. The counterscarp is substantially built of plank, and spread with turf. The glacis is composed of sand and covered with layers of loam and turf, all of which are kept firmly in place by the additions of sections of plank nailed to uprights sunk in the sand, and cross each other at right angles—making squares of about ten feet each. The purpose of the glacis, which is an inclined plane, is to expose an attacking party to the fire of the guns—which are so placed as to sweep it from the crest of the counterscarp to the edge of the beach. Inasmuch as its guns have been spiked and dismantled, it is unnecessary to go into the question of its armament. Whatever it contained is now in the hands of the enemies of the United States, but it is safe to presume that Col. Anderson's leavings will not be effectually employed against the United States much before the end of Mr. Buchanan's term of office.

Castle Pinckney, which has also been taken possession of by the mob, is located on the southern extremity of a narrow strip of marsh land, about halfa mile from Charleston. To the harbor side the castle presents a circular front. It has never been considered of much consequence as a fortress, although its proximity to the city would give it importance, if properly armed and garrisoned. There are about 15 guns mounted on the parapet; the majority of them 18 and 24-pounders. Some "Columbiads" are, however, within the walls. There are also supplies of powder, shot and shell. The Castle has been garrisoned during the present crisis by two watchmen, who have charge of the harbor light! It is not supposed that the two lamplighters offered any considerable resistance to the besieging force.

MAJOR ANDERSON.

"Major Anderson is now about fifty-six years old, and was born in Kentucky, entering the Military Academy from that State, and graduating with distinction on June 30th, 1825. He received his first military commission when he was promoted to a first lieutenancy in 1833, and made a captain by brevet in 1838 for gallantry and successful strategy in the war against the Florida Indians. At that time he was appointed Assistant Adjutant-General, with the rank of captain—the captaincy itself not coming until the 30th of June, 1841, his present rank of Major only reaching him last year.

"Major Anderson has also performed a large amount of the staff duty required to the service a few years since, and before it was made distinct from duty in the line. He acted as Assistant Inspector of the Illinois Volunteers, serving with distinction in the Black Hawk War in 1832. He was Assistant Instructor and Instructor of Artillery at the Military Academy for the years 1835-'37, and was Aide-de-camp to Major-General Scott in 1838.

"During the Mexican War the Major endured all the labors and dangers of the campaign, being engaged in the fiercest assault on the enemy's works at Molina del Rey, and receiving a brevet majority for gallant and meritorious conduct in that action. Major Anderson has also performed more than the ordinary amount of duty in the recruiting service, and other than those bestowed by the War Department.

His last service, previous to his taking command of Fort Moultrie, was as a member of the commission ordered last summer, by Congress, to inquire into the Ordnance Department at the West Point Military Academy. The labors of that commission, in which Mr. Anderson performed his part, have already been laid before Congress.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

The Three C's and the Three R's—The Real Purposes Disclosed—Your Eyes—Scheme for Forming a Central Confederacy of the Border Slave and the Border Free States.

[From Our Own Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26, 1860.

Henry Clay's invariable prescription, warranted to cure all political ills, was three C's to-wit: conciliation, compromise and conciliation. But the three-C medicine is not strong enough for the present phase of the disease; and the Southern doctors are prescribing Revolution, Reconstruction and Reconciliation. Just break up the Union, "read it from turret to foundation;" then rebuild it, putting in new material and leaving out some of the old timbers, and lastly, reconcile the people of the Free States to the new order of things. "Adjustment" was the favorite phrase when I came here a few weeks ago, but I scarcely hear it mentioned in slave-holding circles at this time. Reconstruction is now the talismanic word. It means to pull down and rebuild. The Constitution is to be remodelled. A new theory of government must be taught by it. It must be purged of its Jeffersonian radicalism, and filled with wholesome Calhounism. The idea of the equality of man must be eradicated, and the divinity of Slavery must replace it. The subjugation of the American people now must be described of "persons" in the Constitution, must hereafter be designated as "property" in that instrument. The right of the majority to enslave the minority must be recognized. In short, we must have a new Constitution that will make human bondage its corner stone, and supporting property in man its chief buttress.

The slaveholders have become convinced that the Free States will ratify no amendment to the Constitution recognizing slaves as property, and guaranteeing slavery in the Territories. With less than these concessions they are resolved not to remain in the Union. The repeal of the personal liberty bills, and compensation for fugitive slaves rescued by force are to them bagatelles, of no value, not worth the ink that will record the repeal of the one or the enactment of the other. Let not Western men be deceived by the idle clamor about personal liberty bills and escaping fugitives. The Cotton States care nothing for them. They are shooting at larger game; they are playing for higher stakes. Their order for Major Anderson to leave the Fort, or remove him, Gen. Scott will throw up his commission. The majority of the officers of the army will do the same, and openly declare that their allegiance against the President, who coolly would permit a brave brother officer to be sacrificed in the service of the Union by a mob of Secessionists.

Anderson being in possession of Fort Sumpter, and having about three hundred men, including the laborers, artillery &c., that he has on hand the post lion against all the Secessionists in the Union.

The Richmond Enquirer and Examiner are constantly urging upon Virginians to capture Washington Gov. Letcher, however, says that no such expedition shall leave the Old Dominion with the flag of the Confederate States, and commands its regular military forces.

The same is the opinion of Gov. Hicks, regarding Maryland. There are ten thousand men in the District capable of bearing arms, not one hundred of whom sympathize with the seceders. General Scott declared yesterday that he could muster 20,000 troops, if he would put himself in uniform and head our mobs to defend the Capitol.

Another Shipment of Arms to the South.

[From the N. Y. Eve. Post, 26th.]

We understand, upon competent authority, that five hundred cases of muskets, from the Harvilet Arsenal, opposite Troy, have been shipped to this city, and put on board the steamer Florida, for Savannah.

The refusal of the President to take any steps to reinforce the garrison at Fort Moultrie justifies the presumption that these arms are not moved for the purpose of strengthening the federal government.

We trust Congress will see at once the importance of instituting an inquiry into the question which has been made of any arms or ammunition since the election, that the public may speedily know what light will attach to the transaction. Secrecy on this occasion would be quietest. Such a resolution, we believe, was offered by Mr. Delano, of Massachusetts, a few days since, but in consequence of the objection of the Georgia delegation, its consideration was postponed. General disposition throughout the country to the delegation to prevent this inquiry justifies the suspicion that it would bring out information with which the whole nation is deeply concerned.

Gov. Hicks Still Refuses to Convene the Legislature.

[From the Baltimore American 26th.]

THE CITY.

The Art Exhibition. The rooms are still being liberally visited, and the tickets for the Drawing are selling rapidly.

Runaway.—A steed attached to a sleigh had a match against time down Wells street yesterday, and demolished a buggy near the bridge. Nobody was hurt.

Law Intelligence.—We would call attention to the decision of Judge Drummond in another column in relation to promissory notes, drawn payable with exchange, which takes views in direct opposition to the decision of the Supreme Court of this State, given by us a few days since.

The Printers' Festival.—The Chicago Typographical Union give their Ninth Annual Festival, at the Briggs House, on Thursday evening, January 17th, the anniversary of the Birthday of Franklin. They always have a good time, and are in a fair way to achieve no less on this occasion.

The Glass Foot.—Every lady declares, and we second the motion, that the "glass foot" is just what was needed to give the final touch of perfection to the Sewing Machine. It is a charming improvement, and is attached only to the Wheeler & Wilson machine, which will act it just a foot ahead of all competition.

Mail Closings.—In the closing of mails at the Chicago Post Office, the following changes have been made, to-wit: The morning mail for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad now closes at 9:30 A. M., and the evening mail for the St. Louis, Alton & Chicago Railroad now closes at 6:30 P. M.

Chicago Merchants' Association.—The Chicago Merchant's Association will hold a special meeting at the usual place on Saturday Evening, December 29th at 7 o'clock. All members are earnestly requested to be present, as important business will be under consideration. Members elect of the next Legislature are specially invited.

M. Ladd, Sec'y.

New Religious Weekly.—A new religious weekly, the organ of the New School Presbyterians, is to be immediately commenced in this city, to be called the Presbyterian Recorder. Its editorial staff will be the city pastors of that denomination, and its publication is in competent and excellent hands. This influential and very numerous body will be the gainers of a first class religious weekly, as it can but become in the hands of those enlisted to carry the enterprise onward to success.

A Woman Missing.—Very serious anxiety is felt by her friends for the safety of Mrs. McDonald, a lady about 41 years of age, who left her residence, corner of Front and Elizabeth streets, in the West Division on Monday afternoon, between three and four o'clock, to visit a sick acquaintance on the corner of Reuben and Kinzie streets. After leaving the sick friend, in the terrible snow storm of the night, nothing whatever has been seen or heard of her.

Tenth Ward Temperance Lecture.—The Rev. T. M. Eddy, D. D., the well known editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, will address this organization on temperance on Monday evening next, the 31st inst., at 7 o'clock precisely, in Edwards' Chapel, corner of South Halsted and Harrison streets. The reputation of the speaker as a scholar and lecturer will be sufficient to draw a crowded house. During the evening, officers will be elected for the ensuing quarter. All are earnestly invited. Bear it in mind—7 o'clock.

John B. Gough's Lecture To-night.—The last opportunity to hear this most interesting and instructive lecture on Temperance is now offered our citizens. He will address the Young Mens' Christian Association at Metropolitan Hall, this (Saturday) evening. By special request, he will incorporate in this lecture his most eloquent Apostrophe to Cold Water, which none but John B. Gough can deliver. Secure your tickets early; they may be found at all the book and music stores, and at Knowles' shoe store, under the Hall. This is the only opportunity to hear Mr. Gough during his present visit.

Whisky Did It.—Another victim to one of the Devil's liveliest batteries was added to the list in the Coroner's keeping, by the inquest on the body of a poor inebriate named Henry McDonald, who died suddenly at his wretched home, No. 17 Hubbard street yesterday morning. Two ricketty chairs, an old table, and a dilapidated stove were the only articles of furniture in the house. There was no food nor fuel in the house, in fact nothing but liquor. The wife of the deceased was in a state of drunken stupor during the inquest, and was unable to give any information as to her husband's death. The whole work, however, bore the maker's card in large letters, and the jury returned their verdict accordingly. This is only the fourth death of the kind in less than half as many weeks.

A Conjunction of "Sewing Machines"—Charitable, Creditable and Happy.—We looked in upon a convention of busy-bees at No. 115 Lake street, last evening, at the spacious rooms of Messrs. W. B. Young & Co., of the Grover & Baker Sewing Machine Company. The meeting was that of ladies of the Unitarian Societies, at work for the sufferers in Kansas. An invitation has been generously extended by Messrs. Y. & Co. to the ladies of our several religious denominations to avail themselves of their rooms, operators and machines, in turn, for this purpose. It is nobly conceived, and the ladies will second the purpose generously. This of last evening was the first of the series.

New Steam Vessels for Chicago.—At Manitowoc two first-class steamers are being built at that place, for Capt. Goodrich, of this city. The first is a screw steamer, to take the place of the Ogontz, and her dimensions are as follows: Length, 105 feet; breath at load line 20 feet; on deck, 28 feet; Depth of hold, 11 feet; burthen about 450 tons. This boat is to be launched about the middle of May.

The second is a side-wheel boat to take the place of the Huron. The dimensions are: Length, 150 feet; beam, 25 1-2 feet; depth of hold 10 feet; burthen about 837 tons.

Her cabin is to be finished in the style of the steamer Comet, and she will be fitted up with a liberal regard to comfort and elegance. According to the terms of contract, she is to be completed by the middle of March, when she will be towed to Milwaukee to receive her machinery. The Propeller is intended for the Chicago and Green Bay line, and the steamer will probably run the route from Milwaukee to Manitowoc and Two Rivers.

The Death of Col. E. J. Hamilton.—A meeting of the Chicago bar was held yesterday at the Chicago Law Institute, to take action and pay a tribute of respect to the memory of the late Col. E. J. Hamilton Judge J. M. Wilson was called to preside, and J. F. Clarkson, Esq., was chosen Secretary.

In taking the chair, Judge Wilson referred in appropriate and feeling terms to the deceased, of whom he remarked:

"He was among the first with whom I became acquainted in this city. At that time he was Clerk of the Circuit Court, then held in an old building on Lake street. I came here with Justice Butterfield, and we went to the Court House to see how legal business was carried on in this city. Judge Breese, now on the bench of the Supreme Court, was the Judge, and Col. Hamilton was the Clerk. He was also elected Recorder of this county, and in fact held all the county offices in the gift of the people. He was a gentleman remarkable in many particulars—of very high notions as a gentleman, and of unusual sympathies.

Judge Manierre, Judge Morris, and S. Ashton, Esq., followed in deserved eulogies upon the deceased.

In pursuance of a motion passed at an earlier stage of the meeting, the Chair appointed the Honor, Judge Manierre, Judge Morris and E. C. Larned, Esq., a committee to draft resolutions expressive of the sense of the meeting. Mr. Ashton moved that the members of the bar attend the funeral of the deceased in a body, after which the meeting adjourned until this morning at nine o'clock, to receive the report of the Committee.

The remains of Col. Hamilton were attended to their last resting place yesterday afternoon by a large escort of the Masonic Fraternity, and a cortege of citizens.

The Burch Divorce Case.

It will be received with very general satisfaction by our readers, and especially by the friends of both parties, in this most painful and unfortunate affair, the intelligence that from present promise, and by results already attained in that direction, the whole matter at issue in the late Burch Divorce Case, is to be taken from the Courts, and by competent and candid consideration of the rights and interests of both, adjusted by negotiation and compromise. The arrangement already consummated, stays midway the hearing in progress for a day or two past at Joliet, before Judge Norton, on the Habeas Corpus, brought at suit of Mrs. Burch for the custody of the two children.

This hearing was to have terminated last evening, but we are happy to learn that in this city yesterday afternoon a compromise and parties were agreed upon by which one of the children, the youngest daughter, Harriet Corning Burch, is given to the mother; the eldest, Mary W. Burch, remaining in the home of her father.

As we have stated, from this beginning of adjustment, is promised a final and private settlement of the whole affair, without a repitition of the painful notoriety won for the same in a public trial, and yet without prejudice to the rights of those most keenly interested. Our public will be glad to dismiss the melancholy case from the prominence it has occupied, and in the rush of other events allow a veil to fall upon a social drama which can scarcely a parallel, if any, in the annals of modern society.

The child, Harriet, aged two years and a-half, was given into its mother's keeping in this city yesterday. The elder daughter is nearly twelve years old. The intelligence of this very satisfactory consummation and avoidance of further litigation on this branch of the case was telegraphed to Joliet and stayed proceedings there before the final arguments set for this evening.

A TIMELY REVIEW OF OUR HISTORY.

Rev. Dr. Tiffany's Lecture on Webster.

One of the most timely and effective lectures of the present lecture season, was delivered last evening at Metropolitan Hall, by Rev. Dr. H. Tiffany, who has recently assumed the pastorate of the Clark street M. E. Church in this city. One of the most able and eloquent of our resident clergymen, there is that in the present aspect of our national affairs, which gave to his effort of last evening a force and strength unusual in the lecture room, and the occasion will long be remembered by the large audience at Metropolitan Hall. The lecturers theme was "Webster." Nothing could be more appropriate to the present crisis than the able and eloquent presentation and reproduction of the great statesman's vindication of the Constitution, and appeal for the perpetuity of the Union.

We present portions of the lecture, in the speaker's own words, particularly where in a most impressive manner he recalled the utterances of Webster.

This is the 28th day of December. There is trouble in the land. In New England they are opening a grave for the last survivor of the battle of Bunker Hill. In Carolina they are plotting treason. Has the spirit of liberty departed with Ralph Farnam? Has disruption put its gag with the flames of Fort Moultrie? Has the Union lost its power to compel? Is the past—to wake its spirit—to call up its dead, that they may live again before us, warn us by their experience, cheer us by their counsels.

The year 1832 was a disastrous one in American history. The great statesmen of the Republic had then ceased to stand live. The brightlights of the Confederacy were extinguished—as Calhoun, and Clay, and Webster followed, in quick succession to the tomb.

Each had his own especial gifts and work, and each accomplished it. Calhoun, with unerring eye planned out the future which the South is now accomplishing. Clay by his ruling compromises of layed is consummation until now. While Webster laid down the laws in exposition of the Constitution which alone can enslave us, and breathed into our hearts the love of Union, which will keep us one forever. We come to night to ask of him—and he will not answer—may the Union rest, let us look at his character, and his history.

Webster's early opportunities for education were very scant. He was often sent three miles to school in mid-winter. When young his indefatigable labor already marked him for superiority. He had never aspired to a college education, but after he entered one he made rapid progress. Here he was always the classical he could not make a declamation, as he could not command sufficient resolution. Yet his address to the class of 1801 was a model of its kind. In after years when speaking in public there was a grace in his manner and a fire in his eye which always brought him admirers. After nine years of patient toil and study he was admitted to the bar. He always had a desire to mingle with political associations. It is the glory of most great men to excel in one department. Rarely does the world reach an exhibition of the characteristics combined in one man as were possessed by Webster. As a lawyer he always prosecuted his subject as though glancing down upon it from an elevation. He always opened the case with language of perfect simplicity, but as he proceeded to argue he became truly eloquent, and seldom failed to carry conviction with him. What Gordian knots he could not untie he rent in twain. The skill and compactness with which he presented his argument was admirable. Another admirable feature was his remarkable power of condensation. As an orator, he combined in himself the manner of Burke and the style of Demosthenes. No one ever spoke to the court as Webster did. There was a sense of power in his language suggestive of still greater power. As a statesman, no American but Alexander Hamilton has been his equal in comparison with him. When he entered the Senate he took an oath to support the Constitution—but that oath, to his mind, meant the preservation of the Union. That oath he never violated. He had heard the threats of secession and disunion which have been re-echoed in our days, and he had met them. He had met the fatal title which threatened the Union, and on the 7th of March, 1840, he uttered the following weighty and patriotic admonitions:

Mr. President, I should prefer to have heard from every member on this floor declarations of opinion that the Union could never be dissolved, than the declaration of opinion by a majority of this body, that in any case, under the pressure of any misunderstood grievance, such a dissolution was possible. I hear with distress and anguish the word "Secession." Secession! Peaceable Secession!! Sir, never since the waters were gathered together in their channels, was witnessed on the face of the earth a more extraordinary phenomenon! Never before did the fountains of the great deep without rushing the surface! Who is so foolish as to expect to see any such thing? Who so blind as not to perceive that, by resolving in harmony round a common center, and expecting to see them quit their places and fly off in one direction, we must look for the speedy disorganization of the system, and the destruction of the materials which compose it? In the case before us, a thousand dollars was the sum payable; the exchange. His interest was in the payment in the principal sum and it was not the loss on that account, an agreement to pay a fixed sum. If a note be payable in gold, payable "with interest" and a suit be brought on it before the amount of the verdict or judgment is not a mere matter of computation, but proof must be introduced of the rate of interest in England, and the amount of the verdict or judgment after the interest proof is made, is greater or less, depending upon the fact whether the verdict is rendered to-day, or next week or next year, the amount of interest increasing regularly by effux of time; but when the proof is in, and the time counted then the amount becomes a matter of fact. So when the proof as to exchange is in, and the time fixed then also the amount is a matter of computation. In the one case the principal amount and the rate and, fixed by evidence, controls and determines the verdict or judgment; and in the other. If this suit was brought in the courts of this State, being a note payable in New York, the plaintiff would be entitled to the rate of interest would have to be ascertained, but only from the time of the note fixed by evidence in the Court or jury, of the law of New York as to interest. It would not be till then that the amount would be a matter of computation.

This Court, therefore would adhere to the view that it had always taken of this point, till overruled by the Supreme Court of the United States, that an instrument of the kind described was a promissory note. It was a commercial question, and as a Court was not bound to follow a decision of the Supreme Court of this State on this branch of the law; the decision of which in this ruling was contrary to the opinion of the whole mercantile community as shown by their uniform practice, and contrary to the general thought, to the general opinion of the profession.

Law School of the University of Chicago.—The winter term commences on the 3d of January. An effort will be made at the evening term to give increased interest to all the exercises of the School. There will be three daily lectures or examinations, moot courts twice in a week, and historical debates. Every facility will be afforded for a thoro gh training in the science and practice of Law, as well as in elocution and extemporaneous speaking.

Those whose engagements forbid a full attendance on the exercises of the School, or who desire to pursue a course of study, will be assigned special topics for investigation. Examinations will be held at 10½ A. M. and 2 P. M. Free to all.

Services as usual in the free church of the Holy Communion, corner of Monroe street, by Rev. Dr. Bishop, at 11 A. M. and 7½ P. M.

Rev. Prof. Sturtevant, of Illinois College, will preach in the Second Presbyterian Church, corner of Wabash and Indiana streets, to-morrow morning at 10½ o'clock.

Divine service in the First English Evangelical Lutheran Church, on Monroe street, between Clark and Wells, every Sabbath at 10½ A. M. and 7½ P. M. Sunday School at 2 P. M.

He was among the first with whom I became acquainted in this city. At that time he was Clerk of the Circuit Court, then held in an old building on Lake street. I came here with Justice Butterfield, and we went to the Court House to see how legal business was carried on in this city. Judge Breese, now on the bench of the Supreme Court, was the Judge, and Col. Hamilton was the Clerk. He was also elected Recorder of this county, and in fact held all the county offices in the gift of the people. He was a gentleman remarkable in many particulars—of very high notions as a gentleman, and of unusual sympathies.

Judge Manierre, Judge Morris, and S. Ashton, Esq., followed in deserved eulogies upon the deceased.

In pursuance of a motion passed at an earlier stage of the meeting, the Chair appointed the Honor, Judge Manierre, Judge Morris and E. C. Larned, Esq., a committee to draft resolutions expressive of the sense of the meeting. Mr. Ashton moved that the members of the bar attend the funeral of the deceased in a body, after which the meeting adjourned until this morning at nine o'clock, to receive the report of the Committee.

The remains of Col. Hamilton were attended to their last resting place yesterday afternoon by a large escort of the Masonic Fraternity, and a cortege of citizens.

THE NORTHWEST DISARMED.

While the U. S. Arsenal in the city of Charleston has been furnished by Secretary Floyd with 74,000 stand of arms during the last four years, the Arsenal at Springfield in this State has not, so far as We know, received a gun of any sort whatever. There are in that establishment not more than 30 muskets that are in serviceable and most of the other free States are in the same destitute condition. There appears to have been a systematic effort, on the part of the President and his Cabinet to use, so far as they could do so without exciting alarm, the whole power of the government in filling the South with arms and munitions of war, at the expense of the North, unquestionably with a view of permitting them, at the proper moment, to fall into rebel hands. The effort has been so far successful that in the militia of the Northwest were called upon to aid in the enforcement of the laws, it is probable that all the government muskets in the six States would be insufficient for the arming of three regiments. This condition of things must be met by State action until such time as the Federal Government, by the verdict of the people, is transferred to hands that will not make it an engine for promoting, encouraging and rewarding treason. The particular thing to be done or line of policy to be adopted we leave to the resources and patriotism of those to whom the defence of the honor and safety of Illinois are committed. Let us urge them to meet the crisis with the determination and fearlessness of men who guard great interests. They may be sure that the people are willing to justify and applaud them in whatever wise and necessary thing they may do.

THE EASIEST METHOD.

It is a favorite saying of the New York Herald and politicians of the Satanic school, that the country has outgrown the Constitution; and to insure the tranquility of society and the stability of government, that instrument must be amended. This is only another way of declaring that the institution of Human Slavery, embarrassed and hemmed in by the genius of Free Labor, finds that it cannot perpetuate itself and continue to govern the country, without guaranty that the fundamental law does not contain, and that majorities in Congress cannot override. Reduce the new and inordinate pretensions of the Irish to upon public forbearance, and the difficulties would disappear in a day; and the Constitution as it is would be found as of yore, to be adequate to all the sectional differences that might arise under it, as well as to all wars of interest that legislation might provoke. When, then, we are called upon to choose between different methods of harmonizing the present disputes and restoring peace to the distracted country, every consideration of policy, justice, sectional pride and patriotism bids us ask of the people of the South whether they no longer desire the things they may not exceed the limit that the Constitution fixes, and all will be well. That instrument admits of no tinkering; it is, as applicable to the country at large, the wisest of all human labor, and as such the North is disinclined to maintain it. If the Cotton States want peace, let them respect and obey it. If they will have war with all its attendant calamities and horrors, let them attempt to overturn it. They will be responsible for the consequences, be they what they may.

"BREAD OR BLOOD."

It is the favorite theory of the treason leaders in South Carolina that bread riots and bloodshed throughout the North will inevitably follow in the train of secession. It is difficult to perceive the chain of logic which leads to this conclusion, but it is not at all difficult to perceive a prompt solution of all that class of difficulties. We have never seen any bread-riots in the Northwest. We have seen beer riots, more or less prolonged and unpleasant. We have seen election riots more or less difficult to handle. But we have never seen any bread riots in this quarter or any other. We have observed miserable congregations of vagabonds in front of the City Hall in New York, listening to the inflammatory harangue of a red-haired man with a fashionable coat on his back and some silver in his pocket—all about bread, bread or blood, blood or bread. Some persons in the congregation were doubtless hungry, and desirous of work, but the large majority were lazy and inebriate. Those who were really in quest of honest employment and honest food would have accepted eight dollars a month and the rations of the United States with the utmost alacrity; and it is that class of indigent men who would march into the jaws of death at the command of their officers. The shiftless and the worthless, when other means fail—when beggary ceases to pay and theft leads to the Bridewell,—go voluntarily to the poor-house. Nothing could induce them to fight, however handy they might be at a pillage. But the deserving poor, those who earn fair wages by honest work, and scorn to be dependent on the community, will make not only the best but the most eager soldiers, if the time shall ever come when the schemes of the disunionists throw them out of employment and reduce them to actual want.

The cry will then be not "bread or blood," but "bread and blood." It is impossible for the Cotton States to create the distress in the North which they are already exciting over, it will be an experiment which they will never think of repeating. The North is rich, rich especially in cheap food and plenty of it. The North is abundantly able to take care of her own paupers, present and prospective. The North is even now feeding 30,000 people in Kansas. Indeed, it may almost be said that two or three States in the Northwest among which Illinois is quite the most prominent, are feeding them. And yet none feel inconvenience, but rather pleasure, in giving from their abundance to feed the Lord's poor. But if the worst does come—if multitudes of men do assemble in Northern cities, calling aloud for that which shall satisfy hunger in the present crisis—it will be found that the secession conspirators have created an army to their own destruction.

SECESSION AND SORGHUM.

The danger, now imminent, that before the next harvest is reaped, the political troubles which now agitate the country may ripen into a war with the traitors of the South, bids our farmers begin early to prepare for the commercial wants which this now and deplorable state of things will create. We point out a fact or two which they should bear in mind.

Louisiana, one of the rebellious States, furnishes a large share of the sugar that is consumed in the Northwest. If her industry is interrupted and embarrassed, as it will be if she carries out her programme, by diversion of a part of her labor to military pursuits, and by the wide-spread and alarming slave insurrections which are I break out; and if the ordinary channels of commerce are closed as they will be, the source of sugar supply will be cut off, and we must look to Cuba for all that our people can afford to consume, unless advantage is taken of the productiveness of our soil to raise for ourselves a crop of Sorghum which will yield enough syrup and crystallized sugar to supply our markets. It is fortunate at this juncture, that this plant has demonstrated its value in such a way that no one doubts it. It is unquestionably, in prudent and painstaking hands, not only one of the most certain but most remunerative of all crops that the farmer can put in the ground; and nothing but some necessity which shall compel our then reliance to resort to cane and attain the sugar

Journey of an Elk.

Several weeks since the Lyceum of Natural History of Williams College, received a letter from Rev. Mr. Northrop of Java, tendering them a live elk, a fine native specimen of the Sumatra State, if they would undertake to transport him to the land of the Pilgrims. Even ten years ago such a thing would have been very expensive, and in fact impossible without a personal attendant. The kind offer was at once accepted with the request that his elkship be shipped at once, properly labeled, for his future home among the Yankees. On his long journey of more than a thousand miles he received all the attention due to his distinguished birthright as a native of Northern Iowa, and in due time he arrived at Williamstown in "the best of health and spirits." Here he is treated with "distinguished consideration," for like the good Mohican, the last of his race will in a few generations move be gathered to his fathers and his name alone be left in all the earth.

It is pleasant to mention in this connection that as a compliment to the republic battle, in relation to which he was destined, his elkship received the "usual courtesies" of all the roads over the Canada, over which he had the honor to pass. Our Canada neighbors did not probably detect the high social position of their passenger or they would have been equally courteous to him as the owners of the finest cattle.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

The Indian Trust Fund Robbery—Why this Fund is Gordon Bailey and his Accomplices—A Question as to the Fund—The Money Committee—Its Investigations—Discovery of the Robbery—Further Robberies Suspected—Where Is Wilson?—Out of the Treasury—Troubles of our Infant Republic—A Dead Lock on the Wheels of Government—South Carolina—Effect of the English News—Secession Settling to be a "Hard Road to Travel."

The abstraction of the Indian Trust bonds is still the exciting topic of conversation, and for the moment the secession of South Carolina is forgotten. By the time this reaches you the telegraph may have given you a different version from that now prevailing; therefore I will not enter in much detail nor relate the various accounts afloat in this city.

This much, however, may be stated as true: The amount abstracted reaches $870,000, and that Bailey's alleged confederates are Wm. Russell, of the firm of the great Over-land Pony Express and army transportation contractors, Majors, Russell & Waddell, and Suter, Lea & Co., bankers, of this city. Lea was formerly a clerk in the Indian Bureau, and knew all about the Indian Trust Fund. In relation to these Funds it may be proper to explain what they are, for a better understanding of the nature of the robbery.

According to the provisions of many of the treaties made with the Indians for the purchase of their lands, a certain sum is stipulated to be paid in annual payments, equalling in amount the interest that would be due on the principal. For convenience sake, and to avoid the trouble of raising the annuity by a special appropriation every year, the Government has been in the habit of procuring from Congress in one sum, the whole amount to be paid to the tribe, and of investing it in State stocks and making the interest on these stocks meet the semi-annual payment due the Indians. The amount of the stocks thus held by the Government is $3,449,341, and the interest thereon $202,002. The stocks were chiefly those of Virginia $706,800; Missouri $547,000; North Carolina $562,000; Tennessee $218,000; Kentucky $183,000; Florida $132,000; Maryland $181,000; South Carolina $125,000; Tennessee $861,000; Ohio $150,000; and other States in smaller amounts. They were ordinarily deposited in the vaults of the Treasury for safe keeping, but for some reason were transferred to the Interior Department six months ago, and for some other reason not yet explained were placed in the custody of Gordon Bailey a clerk in the Interior Department, and that too without giving bonds for the safe keeping of the trust. This Bailey is a Southern man, though hailing from Alabama, a young married man of thirty years of age, a dissipated brawler strutting about with a palmetto cockade. He has been a fast liver and a frequent visitor of faro banks, where it is supposed by some that he deposited a portion of the proceeds of the stolen bonds. Government cannot be broken up, that they have not put forth their energies. The time has now come to show that they are aroused. At first the immediate steps will be taken for the purpose of enrolling all our able-bodied men, so as to be ready for any emergency. The Administration of the Government is in the hands of the enemies of the country! The President of the United States has ceased to be the Chief Magistrate of a free people, and may be called the chief of those who are seeking to enslave a free people. He is quoted by the Secessionists, I presume, as native, at least as their quiescent ally! He refuses to exercise his functions, and to enforce the laws! He refuses to protect the public property, and has reinforced the garrison at Fort Moultrie! He sends the Secretary of the Interior to North Carolina, with the intention of forcing that loyal and conquered State into the ranks of the Disunionists! While sending General Harney to Kansas, with a large military force, to suppress a petty border insurgent, Col. Fobis, he arms in General Scott, and his brave subordinates in South Carolina, appeal to him for succor! After-wards he and argues with all his ingenuity against the power of the Federal Government to enforce the laws of the country! His confidants are Disunionists! His leaders in the Senate and in the House, are Disunionists! and while he drives into exile the oldest statesman in America, simply and solely because he dares to be loyal to the Union in favor of the country, he consults daily with men who publicly avow, in their seats in Congress, that the Union is dissolved; and that the laws are standing still! Is it not time, then, for the American people to take the country into their own hands, and to administer the Government in their own way? I have this moment correspondence for weeks past counseled peace, and for so doing have been accused, in certain quarters, with surrendering our cause into the hands of our enemies. This policy has been, however, approved by all conservative men. I have said it to be a high duty to ascertain the President's views in all manner of conciliatory remedies, in order to show them that the Northern people entertained no purpose of wrong or like character. But the hour for such persuasion has passed and gone. The time has come for action! action!! action!!!

What a Southern Army Woman Says.

We gave hearing to a Northern Army Officer, who wrote from Garrettsville, and to his views do not exactly suit us, we give the views of an Army woman—a Southerner—whose words are refreshing. The following is a letter written to a friend in St. Louis:

Of course I love Louisiana best of all the land, but, from the Gulf coast to the lakes, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, I have kind and good friends, and met with kisses from almost all, and no one asked me first whether I was a Northerner or Southerner.

Heaven help us! The grand old men are all dead and silent in their graves; not even an echo of their spirits remains to stir up the sluggish blood that flows through the veins of the dullards who are left. That old lady in disguise up at the White House over there in Washington, is a feeble trifterer, and the day that she surrendered would sell our half-life and soul, (they have no honor to barter,) for gold and power—and that shrew South Carolina raises a shrill scream and seeks to seduce the nation with her wiry palmetto tree. They talk of despotism, forsooth! A fiery disunionist from that State told me yesterday that on last Sunday, when they outlined the prayer for the President and Congress in the churches of Charleston, Mr. Pettigrew, the ablest lawyer there, got up solemnly and respectfully and left the church. "Brave old man!" I said. "Yes," answered my friend, "and his being an old man saved him from a coat of tar and feathers!" They say, in great confidence, that it is not safe for Northerners to go there. Is that a way to prove themselves on the side of liberty and justice?

"As for me, I watch the grand old flag streaming out bravely over the parapets, and my breast aches as I wonder how long it will shelter us. Last evening at retreat, as they lowered the flag, a couple of little children ran forward to the rampart and let it fall on them. I have seen them do the same thing often, but on these occasions the bright little faces and tumbled curls shook themselves free from under the folds, and the soldier gathered it up to carry it down to the Quartermaster's office, I wondered if those little things would live to fight against their pretty plaything, or whether the stars and stripes would be to them only a memory. A way over there in the country the land you don't see and hear as we do on the border, the dreary things that dash against our living lives and our old faith in the right of nation. The Virginians are not riotous. Here and there one sees a blue cockade, but it isn't perched jauntily on the hat. One sees that it is only passed. It has a limp and timorous look.

It is plain the head beneath it sees in it only a roster of ribbons, and does not fully understand the whole of its meaning. I tell you my head hangs and my cheek burns when I hear the rabble stamering so loudly, and not one clear bugle voice raised in the defence of right. Is this a land to be proud of, when the great men are all dead, and the honest citizens seem afraid to speak? Read the Post, for it is full from some one's weak pipes and fall unnoticed, not even a child's voice raised to cry out at them. If the South want to break from the North, why not do it. In a solemnly resolved mood; move out quietly and determinedly, instead of letting squeaky little South Carolina threaten an angry pet and announce to the nation and the world that she, Katharine, will not submit to the North—Petruchio. Then let the name of our country be Ichabod, and even sackcloth and ashes will not save the dwellers in the land. Truly, we have fallen upon troublous times."

Personal Appearance of Major Anderson.

"In physique, the Major is about five feet nine inches in height; his figure is well set and solidly; his hair is thin and turning to iron gray; his complexion swarthy; his eye dark and intelligent; his nose prominent and well formed. A stranger would read in his air and appearance, determination and an exaction of what was due to him. He has a good deal of manner. In intercourse no very remarkable one; and his style and abundant gesticulations go well together. He is always agreeable and gentlemanly, firm and dignified, a man of undaunted courage, and as a true soldier, may be relied on to obey orders and do his duty."

We do not as a general thing like to publish truant wives and daughters, but the following must be an exception to our rule:

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

WHEREAS, My daughter Caroline has left my house without any just cause and reimbursed all the endearing enjoyments of a happy home for the deceptive allurements of a roving life, I am, therefore, constrained to warn all persons from harboring her or contracted by her so long as she persists in this undutiful and most unnatural state of estrangement, from the fostering care of her paternal home. UNCLE SAM.

CHARLESTON POLICE, LOOK OUT!

MR. EDITOR:—By a letter from New York, there is reason to apprehend that the Lincoln men have been gathering up all the rags they can find from the small-pox hospital, and intend an incursion in the South, to cause a stampede, consternation and legislatures from place to place until they are made powerless. Be sure you are on the way, having left New York on Saturday, and will be probably at Kingsville to-morrow, to inoculate the cars loaded with members. CAUTION.

The Monde, a Roman Catholic Journal of Paris, thinks that a Dictator is needed to set the United States right, and recommends Capt. Bonsegna, formerly of Baltimore, for that office.

THE FARM AND GARDEN.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Dec. 24, 1860.

WHAT SHOW HAVE WE THIS AUTUMN?

Considerable discussion has been had as to the best crop with which to seed down to meadow and pasture. One of our city farm-writers recommends oats as the best, from the fact that the heavy foliage would shade the young plants. Oats, as all farmers well know, when the crop is good, has such a large amount of leaves that the ground is so completely shaded that nothing can grow beneath it; or if it survives, it is with a sickly, feeble existence. For this reason, we would never recommend oats as a suitable crop with which to seed down.

WINTER WHEAT is a much better crop for this purpose, and when grass or clover seed is sown on the light snows, it can be done much better than when the ground is bare, for with the snow it is easily seen whether or no every part of the ground is covered—a very important point in the seeding of grass lands. But winter wheat is not always at hand in the north part of our State, and we must then choose some other crop. At the farmers' meetings held in the evenings during the last State Fair, several persons complained that their grass seed had failed, and in some cases, after it had come up it died out. In the south part of the State winter wheat is always, or nearly always, the crop with which the meadows are seeded. Now, we think it safe that the grass will always be a good stand if the seed be good, and that it be sown before the first of March. If grass seed is over a year old, but little of it will grow, hence we have innumerable failures with old seed. Grass seed needs no harrowing after sowing, but it must be sown before the frost ceases to pulverize the surface. After the ground is settled, a roller should be passed over the field to more perfectly pulverize the surface, for such small seeds as the grasses require that the soil be in very fine tilth. On the greyish white soils of Egypt, south of the T. H. & Alton Railroad, it is highly important to sow early, as the heat of the sun on this soil is such that unless the plants are well rooted before the season is much advanced they are pretty sure to be killed by heat and drouth; we think this will account to our southern friends for their oft repeated loss of seed. In the central and north part of the State Spring Wheat is probably the most convenient and best of all our crops to seed with. It is sown so early in the season and clover will start during the cool, moist days of spring, and as the grain gives it only a partial shading, it continues to grow, and will often be found covering the ground with a thick mat of grass, and much of it headed out at the time of harvest, and after harvest, produces a large amount of feed. Not so when sown with the oat crop, with which, if it survives, it makes but a feeble growth. In sowing with spring wheat, it should be sown after the harrowing is completed and rolled. Barley, for the same reason, is also a valuable crop to seed with. Hungarian Grass and Buckwheat are worthless for this purpose. Flax is objectionable on account of the great injury done to the land you don't see and hear as we do on the border, the dreary things that dash against our living lives and our old faith in the right of nation. The Virginians are not riotous. Here and there one sees a blue cockade, but it isn't perched jauntily on the hat. One sees that it is only passed. It has a limp and timorous look.

GRASS SEED AS A CROP

has become one of the great staples of the State, and for its superior quality is much sought after. The absence of Canada thistles, while daisy and other pernicious seed is the great recommendation to the buyer. But to the farmer of the prairie there is another point of no small value, that is the long, oil-developed heads that our soil and climate give to this grass, making a large and sure yield; thus we never hear of a failure of a crop of grass seed. Of course the yield varies, but is always a paying crop.

BARNS NEEDED.

One reason why farmers do not more generally enter into the culture of this crop is the want of barns. Thousands of bushels are lost annually for the want of barns in which to secure the seed. Almost every farmer who owns a barn and a herds is a paradox has grass seed for sale, in fact, unless he is of the most shiftless order of farmers he must have it. We will suppose that he takes particular pains to save it, yet the simplicity of the process is such that he cannot well avoid it, and all it really costs him is the expense of drawing it from the field to the barn filled with barns grass hay will generally turn out more value in seed than saved than enough to pay the interest on the barn, and then that should go far to encourage the building of more farm barns. On the other hand if a farmer wishes to take advantage of his grass seed he can save more seed by having a good barn floor to thresh it on than by the usual out-door's method. He can locate the straw which is valuable as a winter feed when kept dry. We have observed that the quantity of seed sent to market is in proportion to the number of barns, and the increase so does the crop of seed, not so much from the increased amount grown as the greater prosperity thereof.

Our readers will bear in mind that we recommend sowing grass seed very early in the spring with wheat, rye or barley, and not with oats or other crops that "run to straw," instead of harrowing; to see that the ground is in fine tilth and that the seed is not a year old; to have barns if they wish to save it to advantage, a good barn floor is quite necessary.

RURAL.

Cultivation and Preparation of Flax in Iowa.

FAIRFIELD, Iowa, Dec. 21, 1860.

I noticed in your issue of last week an article headed "Flax Cotton Again," and agree with you fully, that at this time this is a subject of "national importance"—one that is destined to revolutionize, to a great extent, the cotton interests of our country, if not of the world. The agricultural classes of the West cannot be too fully alive to the importance of the subject, as it is one that interests them directly as producers. Many of our farmers have been in the habit of growing flax simply for the seed; the straw having been heretofore a waste article entirely. And if without too much labor they can realize a handsome price for the straw, an important desideratum will have been gained, which will make the flax crop one of the most profitable they can raise, as will also equalize the prices of Southern cotton.

We have had in operation at this place one of "Randall's Breaks" and a "Scutcher, or Duster," both manufactured in Rhode Island, for the purpose of preparing flax straw for the manufactory. The process is as follows:

The flax is mowed with an ordinary scythe or mowing machines, before it is thoroughly ripe, and is cured, in every respect, the same as hay. It may then be stacked in the same or any other grain, the tangling of the straw not injuring the fibre in the least. It is not necessary that it should undergo a rotting process, as it breaks equally as well without, the only advantage of rotted over unrotted straw being, in the distance it may have to be hauled, as the former weighs about one-half less than the latter, there being a corresponding difference in price.

What Henry Clay Thought of Disunion.

In 1850, when Georgia threatened to secede, Henry Clay said, in his place in the Senate:

"Now, Mr. President, I stand here in my place, meaning to be unshaken and firm, whether they come from individuals or from States. I should deplore as much as any man, living or dead, any action which should be taken against the authority of the Union, either by individuals or by States. But, after all that has occurred, if any one State, or a majority of the people of any State, choose to place themselves in military array against the government of the Union, I am for keeping the strength of the government. I am for ascertaining whether we have a government or not—practical, efficient, capable of maintaining its authority, and of upholding the powers and interests which belong to a government. Nor, sir, am I to be alarmed or dissuaded from any such course by intimations of the spilling of blood. If blood is to be spilt, by whose fault is it? Upon the supposition, I maintain it will be the fault of those who choose to raise the standard of disunion and endeavor to prostrate this government; and, sir, when that is done, so long as it pleases God to give me a voice to express my sentiments, or an arm, weak, enfeebled as it may be by age, that voice and that arm will be on the side of my country for the support of the general authority, and for the maintenance of the powers of this Union."

The True Basis of Settlement.

No adjustment can be reached unless the Southern States formally agree to abandon their pretensions, for all time to come, to secede from, and break up this Union. They must recognize the Government as a Government, capable of preserving itself. How can they propose to reconstruct a Government while claiming the right at any time to secede from and destroy it. Senator Wade of Ohio made the overwhelming point in the Senate Committee of Thirteen this morning, when he said that he had no idea of making a bargain with men who might carry their State out and join the common enemy at any time, or turn the forts of the Federal Government against the Government itself. Here, then, is the true platform upon which the Union can be restored. Concession to secession, and when secession is abandoned all the rest yields.—Washington Correspondence of the Philadelphia Press.

[From the Home Journal, N. Y., Aug. 17, 1859.]

Among the many apparent trifles continually being brought to the surface from the liberal undercurrent of this country, there are occasionally simple articles casting but little in detail, but whose combined branches, usefulness and economy of time and money, agree-able on the basis of millions. Such an article is SPALDING'S PREPARED GLUE. Its uses are innumerable, and as its cost is next to nothing, the demand for it is universal. It is prepared with chemicals, and need cold—requiring but little skill or time for its application.

Aid for Kansas.

MENOMONEE, Dunn Co., Wis., Dec. 19, 1860.

Editors Chicago Tribune:

A "Kansas Relief Society" has been organized in this place. Over one hundred dollars have already been subscribed, seventy-five of which have been forwarded. We do not intend to stop here. Grain could be had, but we can't ship it till the opening of navigation in the spring. Yours, &c.,

F. R. CRUSEN, Secretary.

The Committee of Thirteen.

The Committee of Thirteen sat three hours to day, and reached one important result. It has been constantly charged by the South, and was repeated in Mr. Nicholson's speech to-day, that the growing power of the Republican party threatened amendments to the Constitution by which their rights in the States would be impaired, if not destroyed. To meet this difficulty the Republicans conferred together, and submitted the following propositions through Mr. Seward, though they were drawn by Messrs. Grimes and Collamer.

First: No amendment shall be made to the Constitution which will authorize or give to Congress any power to abolish or interfere in any State with the domestic institution thereof, including that of persons held to service or labor by the laws of such State.

This was carried by the following vote:

NAYS—Messrs. Davis and Toombs—2.

Second: The Fugitive Slave law of 1850 shall be so amended as to secure to the alleged fugitive a trial by jury.

Mr. Douglas proposed to amend by inserting "in the State from which the fugitive escaped." This was carried, and then the whole proposition was voted down by the Democrats, all the Republicans sustaining it.

Third: It shall be respectfully recommended to the several State Legislatures to review all of their laws, affecting the rights of persons recently resident in other States, and to modify and repeal all such as shall contravene the provisions of the Constitution of the United States or any of the laws made in pursuance thereof.

This was lost as follows:

NAYS—Messrs. Powell, Hunter, Toombs, Douglas, Davis, Bigler and Rice—7.

The Southern men voted adversely upon the ground that, though it was not openly assigned, this proposition would affect their laws imprisoning colored seamen.

It will be seen that the extremists would not sustain the propositions intended to meet the very cases they have specifically charged against the North.

Mr. Toombs' resolutions were then called up and four of them voted upon, Mr. Douglas refusing to go upon the record. They were then postponed till Wednesday, Mr. Toombs and the ultras resisting any delay. And for the transparent object of using the action of the Committee to operate upon the pending elections for the Southern Conventions, Mr. Davis offered the following resolution, which lies over with the others:

That it shall be declared by amendment of the Constitution that property in slaves, recognized as such by the local law of any of the States of the Union, shall stand on the same footing in all Constitutional and Federal relations as other species of property so recognized; and, like other property, shall not be subject to be divested or impaired by the local law of any other State, either in escape therefrom, or by the transit or sojourn of the owner therein. And in no case whatever shall such property be subject to any other or greater impairment by any legislative act of the United States, or any of the Territories thereof.—Washington Correspondence N. Y. Tribune.

Under the head of "A Fraternal Sentiment," the National Intelligencer publishes the following from the Charleston Mercury:

When gaunt and shivering men, women and children shall wrangle for crusts, and fight in pairs, but in desperate and savage crowds; and when the shout shall break upon the car for bread or blood [it may not be long, there shall be blood, but little bread,] when starvation shall strike the props from under capital; and when, finally, that gilded temple at the North, built up from robberies upon the south, will fall, and rapine among the ruins shall supply to the laborer the means of subsistence, then shall they realize our wrongs, and our might, and at that day may they call upon God, for he alone will heed them. Our ear will be deaf to their solicitations. The debt between us will be cancelled. As two nations we shall sacredly face each other, each to guard its own interests.

MONETARY.

FRIDAY EVENING, Dec. 28, 1860.

We are glad to notice a continued demand for currency, owing to the increased activity in the pork trade. Prices on our leading packers are coming in lively from the country, and in some of the banks the large surplus which they have been carrying for the last six weeks has been worked down almost to a comfortable working basis. If the drain keeps up for another week as it has for the past, active employment will be found for all the currency our bankers have at immediate command. As might be expected, the feeling in financial circles is decidedly more cheerful. The wheels of commerce actually begin to move, the embargo on trade is steadily, and it is to be hoped, surely dissolving, infusing life and activity into all departments of trade. The bugbear of dissolution must in less than seventy days ride its hideous head for every man to hear, and if yeas are ture it, head for every man to hear, and if yeas are ture it, head for every man to hear, and if yeas are ture it,
